The number of NHS miles with recurring congestion and a large number of trucks is forecast to increase fourfold between 2002 and 2035. On highways carrying more than 10,000 trucks per day, recurring congestion will slow traffic on more than 4,800 miles and create stop-and-go conditions on an additional 23,300 miles.